EDITOR'S NOTE

Sixty Years in One Story

Sixty years is a milestone worth pausing for. It is a moment to remember those who laid the foundations, to thank the many hands that kept the school going through every season, and to look ahead with confidence.

Sixty years ago, on land given in faith, a community decided its children deserved a secondary school. This magazine is the story of what grew from that decision.

In these pages you will meet the founders and the families who gave land, the head teachers, the teachers who stayed, and the old students who carried Labour for Success across Uganda and beyond. Many of the stories come from people who saw it all and opened their homes, diaries and memories to us.

We thank every one of them, and everyone who sent a photograph, a message or a memory. Some names and dates are still being gathered; this story is still being written.

Read it, share it, and add your own chapter.

ROYAL MESSAGE

A Royal Message from the Kamuswaga of Kooki

Sixty Years of a Shared Vision

HRH Kamuswaga Apollo Isansa Kabumbuli II
THE 13TH KAMUSWAGA OF KOOKI

It is with great joy and pride that I join the Kakoma Secondary School family in celebrating sixty years of service to our people.

The story of Kakoma is, in many ways, the story of Kooki's belief in education. Land given by the Kingdom to the Church of Uganda at Kakoma became, through the generosity of Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish, the 93 acres on which this school was founded in 1967. That gift was more than land. It was a statement of faith in the future, a conviction shared by the Kingdom, the Church and the community that the children of Kooki deserved a place to learn, to grow and to rise.

Sixty years later, that faith has been rewarded many times over. Kakoma has opened its doors to generations of young people, from the pioneer students of 1968 to the young men and women in its classrooms today. Its old students now serve in government, in business, in education and in their communities, across Uganda and beyond. Wherever they go, they carry the values of this place and the motto they learned here: Labour for Success.

I pay tribute to the founders and founding families; to the head teachers, teachers and staff who have served this school with dedication; to the Board of Governors and the parents who have supported it through every season; and to the old students who continue to give back. Your labour has borne fruit.

As we celebrate, we must also look ahead. Education remains the surest path to the transformation of Kooki. I continue to encourage every family to keep their children, and especially our girls, in school, and to see education, not early marriage, as the foundation of a good life. I also call upon our young people to know and treasure who they are. Our language, our culture and our heritage are part of the strength we bring to the world.

The Diamond Jubilee Hall project is a fitting symbol of the journey ahead. I invite old students, friends of Kakoma and all people of goodwill to support it, so that the generations to come may learn in the same spirit of hope with which this school began.

To the Head Teacher, staff and students of Kakoma Secondary School: congratulations on sixty remarkable years. May the next sixty be greater still.

May God bless Kakoma Secondary School, and may God bless Kooki.

HRH Kamuswaga Apollo Isansa Kabumbuli II

MESSAGE

From the Bishop of West Buganda Diocese

The Rt. Rev. Gaster Nsereko

THE 7TH BISHOP OF WEST BUGANDA DIOCESE

"Kakoma's story began on Church land, with an act of faith."

Grace and peace to you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

On behalf of the Diocese of West Buganda, I join the whole Kakoma family in giving thanks to God for sixty years of Kakoma Secondary School. I congratulate the Head Teacher, Mr. Bbaale David, the staff and students, the Board of Governors, the old students and every friend of Kakoma on this Diamond Jubilee.

The Church rejoices with special joy today, for Kakoma's story began on Church land. Long before the school was born, the Kingdom of Kooki gave land to the Church at Kakoma. In 1967, Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave 93 acres of that land so that a school could rise. It was an act of faith: a belief that the children of this community deserved to grow in knowledge, in character and in the fear of the Lord.

Sixty years on, we see the fruit of that faith. Generations of young people have passed through these classrooms and gone out to serve their families, churches, communities and our nation, in Uganda and beyond. They carry with them the school's motto, Labour for Success, a motto that echoes the words of Scripture: "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it" (Psalm 127:1). Our labour bears lasting fruit when we place it in God's hands.

I give thanks for the founders and founding families, for the head teachers, teachers and staff who have served with dedication, for the parents who have sacrificed, and for the old students who continue to give back. I thank the Organising Committee for bringing us together to celebrate.

To the students of today: you are the heirs of this gift. Work hard, keep God at the centre of your lives, respect one another and use your gifts to serve others. To the old students and friends of Kakoma: I encourage you to support the Diamond Hall and the work that lies ahead, so that the generations to come may find here the same opportunity you found.

As we celebrate, let us hold on to the words of the Apostle Paul: "Be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Corinthians 15:58).

May the Lord bless Kakoma Secondary School, keep it a place of light and learning, and make the next sixty years more fruitful still.

The Rt. Rev. Gaster Nsereko

THE 7TH BISHOP OF WEST BUGANDA DIOCESE

Owek. Richard Sseggwanyi
CHAIRMAN, BOARD OF GOVERNORS

MESSAGE

From the Board Chairman

On behalf of the Board of Governors of Kakoma Secondary School, I welcome you to the celebration of our Diamond Jubilee and thank you for joining us today.

Sixty years ago, this school was born of faith and community. Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave 93 acres of land that the Kingdom of Kooki had long before given to the Church, and the people of Kooki built a school for their children. Since 1976 the school has been government-aided, and it has grown to offer both O and A Level. The Board is proud to carry that trust today.

We pay tribute to the founders and founding families, to the ten head teachers who have led Kakoma through every season, and to the teachers and staff who have served with dedication, many of them for decades. We thank the parents, whose sacrifice built much of what stands here, and the old students, who have never forgotten where they began.

"We hold this school in trust for the generations still to come."

The Board's duty is to guard the school's land, its values and its future. As we celebrate, we must also be honest about the work ahead. Many of our buildings need renewal, our students need modern facilities, and our teachers need support. The Diamond Hall is the first step, and I appeal to every old student, parent and friend of Kakoma to stand with us in building it.

To the Head Teacher, Mr. Bbaale David, the staff and the students: the Board stands with you. To the Diamond Jubilee Organising Committee, led by Dr. Isaac Nsereko: thank you for bringing the Kakoma family together.

We hold this school in trust for the generations still to come. May we hand it on stronger than we received it.

May God bless Kakoma Secondary School.

Dr. Isaac Nsereko
CHAIRMAN, DIAMOND JUBILEE ORGANISING COMMITTEE

MESSAGE

From the Organising Committee

In 1967, Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave 93 acres of its land so that a school could rise at Kakoma. That generous gift, from land the Kingdom of Kooki had given to the Church long before, became Kakoma Secondary School. On behalf of the Diamond Jubilee Organising Committee, I warmly welcome you to the celebration of sixty years of Labour for Success.

As an old boy of this school myself, it has been a privilege to work alongside fellow old students, the school administration, the Board of Governors and friends of Kakoma to prepare for this milestone.

Our journey to the Jubilee has brought the Kakoma family together. Our fundraising dinners at Royal Suites, Bugolobi, on 15 August 2026, and at Maple Leaf Hotel, Masaka, where Hajji Jamil Ssempijja was our Guest of Honour, gathered old students and well-wishers in support of the school that shaped so many of us.

At the heart of this Jubilee is the Diamond Hall, a planned multi-purpose hall that will serve generations of students to come. It is our gift from this generation to the next, and I invite every old student, parent and friend of Kakoma to support it.

"The Diamond Hall is our gift from this generation to the next."

We are also bringing Kakoma closer to its family wherever they are. Through kakomass.com, old students everywhere can follow the school's news and read this magazine, and e-learning for our students is on the way.

I sincerely thank His Royal Highness the Kamuswaga of Kooki, the Church, the Board of Governors, the Head Teacher, Mr. Bbaale David, and his staff, our sponsors and advertisers, and every member of the Organising Committee for their dedication.

This magazine tells our story: the founders, the head teachers, the students and the memories that make Kakoma who we are. Thank you for joining us today to celebrate sixty years, and I hope you will treasure this magazine for many years to come.

May God bless Kakoma Secondary School.

Mr. Bbaale David
HEAD TEACHER

MESSAGE

From the Head Teacher

Welcome to Kakoma Secondary School on this historic day. On behalf of the staff and students, I thank you for coming to celebrate sixty years with us.

As Head Teacher in our Diamond Jubilee year, I am deeply aware that I stand on the shoulders of those who came before me: the founders who gave land and labour, Mr. Kayongo Mesuseera and the head teachers who followed him, and the teachers who gave this school the best years of their lives. Their work earned Kakoma the name the community still uses with pride: the University of Kooki.

Today Kakoma is a government-aided, Church of Uganda founded school teaching both O and A Level. Much has changed since the first students arrived. We now have electricity, qualified teachers, a girls' hostel and science laboratories, and our students continue to learn, compete and grow. Labour for Success is not only our motto; it is our daily practice.

"Labour for Success is not only our motto; it is our daily practice."

We also know the challenges. Our older buildings need renewal, we need more teachers, and our students deserve the facilities that will prepare them for today's world. The Diamond Hall, a planned multi-purpose hall, and the new playground will help us meet those needs, and I thank everyone who has pledged their support.

I thank the Board of Governors, the Diamond Jubilee Organising Committee, the parents, the old students and all our partners for walking this journey with us. To our students: you are the reason this school exists. Work hard, respect one another, and keep God first.

May God bless Kakoma Secondary School for the next sixty years and beyond.

DIAMOND JUBILEE

Late in the nineteenth century, Kamuswaga Kezekia Edward Ndaula II of Kooki gave land to the Church at Kakoma. In 1967, Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave 93 acres of that land, and Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi added five acres of his own, so that a secondary school could rise.

Sixty years on, this is the story of a school that has shaped generations of students, teachers and families in Rakai and far beyond.

TOGETHER FOR KAKOMA
Old students, the board and friends of the school at the Diamond Jubilee fundraising dinner.

The School History

Before it was a secondary school, Kakoma was a hope shared by a whole community. Livingstone Kintu Mwanje, who has watched the school since its first days, tells how it began.

Livingstone Kintu Mwanje, a former PTA chairman who studied at Kakoma in 1969 and has seen every head teacher since.

Kakoma's roots go deeper than 1967. The Church at Kakoma had run a primary school since 1938, and many of its pupils finished with nowhere to go next. "Getting a child into a secondary school was a real tug of war," recalls Livingstone Kintu Mwanje, a former chairman of the school's PTA who has known Kakoma since its first days. "Those who got a place knew it was a real chance."

In 1965, he recalls, Mr. Ssali Kajumge started Kakoma Junior Secondary School as an extension of the primary school, teaching Junior One to Junior Three. When the junior system came to an end in 1966, the school grew into a full secondary school, and in 1967 Kakoma Secondary School officially began.

It was a community school from the start. "The people of Kooki started it without religious bias," Mr. Mwanje says. At a time when religion still shaped how schools were run, the Muslims of Kamengo contributed alongside everyone else, because this was their school too. Families practised okuweleka, placing a child with relatives or a family near the school so that the child could study.

For years Kakoma was the secondary school of the whole area. The nearest others were Kako, St. Henry's College, Masaka Aga Khan (today Masaka SS) and Christ the King, a girls' school, and students came from Lyantonde, Isingiro and across greater Rakai. People called it "the University of Kooki". Finishing Senior Four was special, and, in Mr. Mwanje's words, those who did "never remained ordinary people".

He knows it first-hand: he studied at Kakoma in Senior One in 1969 before going on to Namutamba Teachers College. He credits the school's high standard to the head teacher of those years, Mr. Kayongo Mesuseera, "a real teacher" who came from Kako Secondary School.

THE LAND

A Gift of Land: Kingdom, Church and Community

Kakoma's land has a story older than the school itself, and it is kept in a family diary.

Late in the nineteenth century, the Kamuswaga of Kooki, Kezekia Edward Ndaula II, married Kimpwedde Tabuzibwa. Her brother fought alongside the Kamuswaga to defend the boundaries of the Kingdom. As a reward, the family recalls, the Kamuswaga told him to measure out land: two square miles for his sister, the Kamuswaga's wife, and one for himself. He asked for one thing more. The Church needed land too, he said, and so a further square mile was measured for the Church at Kakoma.

He died in 1920. His son, Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi, wrote the story down in his diary, and his granddaughter, Nabulime Joyce, still reads it today.

"From one square mile measured for the Church, 93 acres became a school."

For almost half a century the Church's land served the parish and, from 1938, its primary school. Then, in 1967, Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave 93 acres so that a secondary school could rise. Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi added five acres of his own, on the very spot where the school's buildings stand today.

The two gifts, made two generations apart, came from one family's faith in the Church and in education.

THE FOUNDERS

The Founding Families

FATHER OF THE SCHOOL

Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi

1902 – 1986

Educated at King's College Budo, Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi was among the leaders who made Kakoma Secondary School possible. Remembered by Mr. Kayongo's family as the Gombolola chief of Mukungwe, he was part of the group that heard how Mr. Kayongo Mesuseera had built up Kako Secondary School and persuaded him: "Let us bring him, so that he can start ours too."

He gave five acres for the school's buildings, and iron sheets when those from the junior school ran short. He gave shelter to students who came from far away and rented rooms to others at a price they could afford, served as an early chairman of the PTA, and brought rare trees to plant on the land. He died on 26 December 1986.

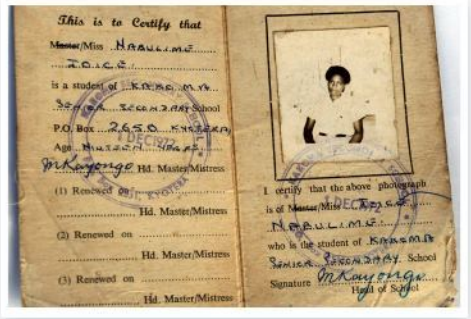

ONE OF THE FIRST STUDENTS

Nabulime Joyce

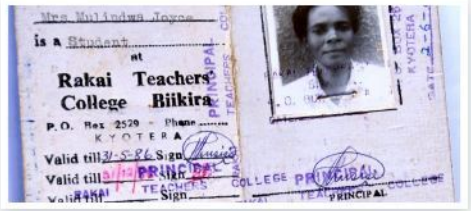

Old Girl, 1969 – 1972

His daughter, Nabulime Joyce, was one of Kakoma's very first students. She joined in 1969 and finished Senior Four in 1972, in a candidate class of only about six. Students then lived in a residence they called the White House. Her student card, signed by Mr. Kayongo in December 1972, survives to this day.

She went on to train as a teacher at Rakai Teachers' College, Biikira, and served as head teacher of Nsozibbiri Primary School, carrying her family's gift of learning into another generation.

FOUNDING FAMILY

Mr. Ssali Kajumge

Remembered as the founder of Kakoma Junior Secondary School in 1965, the first step towards the secondary school.

Their legacy today

Three generations of one family gave Kakoma its ground: a grandfather who asked the Kamuswaga for land for the Church, a father who brought the school its great first head teacher and gave land for its buildings, and a daughter who was among the first to finish Senior Four. Their story, like those of all the founding families, is woven into Kakoma's sixty years.

SIX DECADES

The Eras of Kakoma

1960S – 70S

The Founding Years

Kakoma grew from a junior secondary school in 1965 into a full secondary school in 1967. Under Mr. Kayongo Mesuseera it earned its name as "the University of Kooki". The school became government-aided in 1976, and its first candidates sat national examinations in 1979, under Mr. Nsumba Waakulira, who started the collection for a school truck.

1980S – 90S

Growing Through Change

Mr. Lutaaya Samuel Baker bought the school truck, and in 1984 the A-Level section opened with four students. Mr. Ssekamwa Kaggwa Samuel put academics first, involved students in farming, planted a forest and kept the food store full. Old students remember inter-class football, barefoot first days and teachers who "made us what we are".

2000S

A New Century

Under Mr. Musiime John, remembered as caring and hard-working, Kakoma was a sports champion in inter-Rakai district and represented Rakai District at the national Coca-Cola football tournament. Mrs Elizabeth Luswata, who led the school for sixteen years, oversaw the building of the girls' hostel, with parents and support from World Vision, and of new science laboratories.

2010S – TODAY

Kakoma Today

Much of what stands today was built by parents through the PTA. Since 2020, Kanyonza Besigensi, Ssekitoleko Alice and now Mr. Bbaale David have led a school facing new competition, as old students rally around the Diamond Hall and a renewed vision for the next sixty years.

AN ELDER'S APPEAL

The school needs a face-lift and total renovation of its buildings, more teachers and better teacher welfare, stronger co-curricular activities and real skilling for students. "When a parent complains about paying 40,000 shillings, they are forgetting the spirit that started this school."

1978 – 1980

Started the collection for the school truck.

03

Lutaaya Samuel Baker

1981 – 1988

Led Kakoma through most of the 1980s; bought the school truck. Old students remember a head teacher who shaped them.

04

Ssekamwa Kaggwa Samuel

1989 – 1994

Put academics first, involved students in farming, planted a forest and began the girls' hostel. Today LC V Chairman, Rakai.

05

Rev. Kateregga Bakubanja

1995 – 1999

Remembered by students of the 1990s as Rev. Canon Bakubanja, a head teacher who shaped them.

06

Mr. Musiime John

2000 – 2003

Caring, understanding and hard-working; remembered for "introducing us to the world".

07

Mrs Elizabeth Luswata

2003 – 2019

Led Kakoma for sixteen years, the longest of any head teacher; oversaw the girls' hostel and new science laboratories.

08

Kanyonza Besigensi

2020 – 2022

Head teacher from 2020 to 2022.

09

Ssekitoleko Alice

2022 – 2025

Head teacher from 2022 to 2025, in the years leading up to the Diamond Jubilee.

EACH BROUGHT KAKOMA THROUGH ITS OWN SEASON

HEAD TEACHER OF THE FOUNDING YEARS

Kayongo Mesuseera, 1900–1977

When he came to Kakoma in 1969, he already had a teachers' college and two secondary schools behind him. This is his story, as told by his son, Kigula Dan Kayongo.

Kayongo Mesuseera was born on 23 March 1900 at Kindulwe village, Kabuwoko, in greater Masaka, to the late Enock Musoke Balubulizza and Elina Mujooga. He began his education at Kabuwoko Primary School, went on to Mengo for Junior One to Junior Three, and then to King's College Budo, where he was among the best students. According to his family, a scholarship took him to Oxford, where he studied English and Divinity, and he spent six years abroad.

From 1945 to 1959 he was Principal of Namutamba Teachers Training College, a service the college's Old Students Club later honoured with a certificate of thanks. In 1953 he received the Queen's Coronation Medal, sent to him from Buckingham Palace "by command of Her Majesty the Queen".

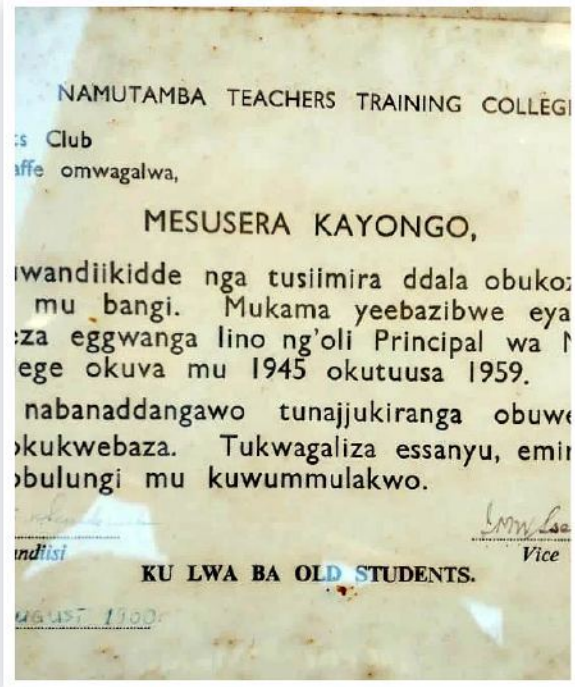

In 1960 he started Nateete Mackay Secondary School, which he led until 1964, and from June 1965 to December 1969 he was the first head teacher of Kako Secondary School.

After retiring from government service, he met Mzee Blasio Kisuule Mugenyi, the Gombolola chief of Mukungwe, who brought him to Kakoma. He led Kakoma Secondary School from October 1969 until June 1977, giving the young school the experience of a lifetime in education.

He died on 24 July 1977.

AN EYEWITNESS TO THE BEGINNING

His son, Kigula Dan Kayongo, was a primary pupil when Kakoma began. He helped to lay the nine-inch bricks used to build the school's main block.

EVERY OLD STUDENT IS PART OF KAKOMA'S STORY

IN THEIR WORDS

Voices & Memories

At the Old Students' Dinners, we asked: what is your first memory of Kakoma, and who shaped you? Here is what they wrote.

> When I look back, I remember the teachers who guided us, the friends we made, the challenges we faced, and the lessons we learned inside and outside the classroom. Some of those lessons have stayed with me all my life.
>
> SSENKUMBA ROSETTE
> 1984–1987 · Researcher and digital librarian

> I came carrying all my belongings in a table cloth: my mattress, bed sheet and blanket. And I was barefoot. Kakoma was the eye-opener of my long journey.
>
> NAKIMBUGWE HARRIET
> 1978–1981 · Nurse, Kyotera

> Mr. Samuel Lutaaya, our head teacher, shaped me. Kakoma shaped my education career.
>
> OWEK. KYEWALABYE MALE DAVID
> 1983–1986 · Retired Minister, Buganda Kingdom

> I remember when Kakoma excelled in football and represented Rakai District at the national Coca-Cola tournament. Teacher Didi's parental love will always be remembered.
>
> ABAHO GEORGE
> 1998–2003 · Officer, URA

> We were teased on the first day and we cried like babies! Kakoma was a stepping stone for the future.
>
> JOHNMARY SSEBUWUFU
> 1986–1989 · Speaker, KCCA

> I reported to school barefoot, and we used to dine out in the bush because the compound was not yet demarcated. Kakoma groomed me into a graduate teacher.
>
> NAKIRIDDE HARRIET KATENDE
> 1980–1984 · Retired head teacher

> Mr. Kasozi taught me Social Studies very well. Kakoma means hard work.
>
> NAZZIWA SARAH
> 1980–1983 · Teacher, Lwengo District

> Former head teacher Mr. Musiime John shaped me. Kakoma SS introduced me to the world. In my time, Kakoma was good at sports and academics.
>
> MUGABI DALAUSI
> 1998–2001 · Real estate dealer

> Kakoma was champion in sports in inter-Rakai district, and it shaped me to be hard-working.
>
> BUKENYA MUSA
> 2001–2002 · Executive Director, Volunteer Action Network

11 Ways to Rekindle Love and Strengthen Your Marriage

A fulfilling marriage takes intentional effort, honest communication and shared values. Blessed Christine Ssegawa Najjuma shares practical ways couples can nurture love, strengthen their connection and grow together.

BY BLESSED CHRISTINE SSEGAWA NAJJUMA
Old Girl, Kakoma SS, 1984–1988

Marriage, like any meaningful goal in life, requires thought, preparation, commitment and consistent effort. Couples who want a fulfilling union must be willing to invest in it, learn from their experiences and make adjustments as life changes.

For those who enjoy cooking, we understand the value of spices. The right ingredients, used in the right quantities, can turn an ordinary meal into something special. Marriage also benefits from thoughtful additions that keep the relationship meaningful, exciting and fulfilling.

There is no single formula for a happy marriage. Marriage is a commitment between two people, a man and a woman, united before God, their families and witnesses. It calls for connection, selflessness, communication, availability and daily choices that affirm the relationship. Each day offers an opportunity to discover something new about your spouse, pursue shared dreams and learn to resolve disagreements respectfully.

Here are 11 practical ways to rekindle love and strengthen your marriage.

1. Rekindle Your Love Every Day

Never allow the love in your marriage to become an afterthought. Begin by grounding yourself in the unconditional love of God. This can help you extend love, patience and grace to your partner, even during difficult seasons.

Take time to understand your spouse's preferred love languages and share your own. The five commonly recognised love languages are:

- Acts of service
- Words of affirmation
- Gifts
- Physical touch
- Quality time

Identify the two that mean the most to your spouse and express love in ways they appreciate. Be willing to forgive, avoid keeping a record of past wrongs, and cultivate patience, kindness, humility, goodness and self-control. Love requires nurturing, and both partners have a responsibility to keep it alive.

2. Let God Be at the Centre of Your Marriage

Commit your marriage and your spouse to God daily, and trust Him with the challenges you face individually and together. Pray for your spouse and seek wisdom when making decisions. Make faith part of your daily life as a couple: pray together, encourage one another spiritually and allow your shared values to guide the way you treat each other.

3. Build a Strong Identity for Your Marriage

Be intentional about building a marriage that reflects your shared values and aspirations. Create meaningful moments through regular dates, weekend outings, holidays or simple activities that allow you to reconnect. What matters is not the expense but the time and thought you invest in each other.

Agree on the family values, traditions and routines you want to build, and make your home a place of peace, warmth and romance. Remember, your bedroom should be a place of intimacy and connection, not a courtroom for arguments or a battlefield for unresolved disagreements.

4. Develop Healthy Communication Habits

Communication is one of the foundations of a strong marriage. Speak honestly, listen carefully and make room for conversations about your physical, social, spiritual, financial and emotional needs. Learn how your spouse communicates through words, actions and body language, and remember that styles differ: some people are passive, others aggressive, assertive or passive-aggressive.

Avoid the silent treatment and resist the temptation to make assumptions. Listen to understand, rather than only to prepare your response, and make time for face-to-face, affectionate conversations. Protect your marriage from gossip, hearsay and sharing private matters with people who may not have your best interests at heart. Where professional support is needed, seek appropriate and trusted guidance.

5. Pursue Your Individual Dreams and Support Each Other

Marriage should provide room for both partners to grow as individuals while building a shared future. Discover your individual purpose, work towards your aspirations, encourage your spouse to do the same and celebrate each other's progress.

Both spouses should be able to contribute to the family's financial wellbeing and participate in financial decisions. Discuss your income, expenditure, savings and investments openly, and manage money as a shared responsibility rather than a constant source of conflict. One suggested approach is to allocate portions of income towards giving, savings, investment and personal or family expenses, within a realistic budget you agree on together.

6. Establish Healthy Boundaries

Healthy boundaries protect your relationship and create clarity about how you interact with family members, friends, workmates and others. Discuss the boundaries that matter to both of you, from privacy, friendships and family involvement to finances, work commitments and personal time, and respect the commitments you make to each other. Understand your spouse's strengths, preferences and areas of vulnerability, and review your agreements together as your circumstances change.

7. Cultivate Healthy Eating and Living Habits

Your physical wellbeing also matters in marriage. Eat well, exercise, maintain healthy routines and encourage each other to attend regular medical and dental check-ups. Make healthy living a shared activity by preparing meals together, taking walks or setting realistic wellness goals, so you can enjoy more meaningful time together.

8. Nurture Romance, Intimacy and Physical Connection

Physical and emotional intimacy are important parts of marriage. Discuss your needs, preferences and expectations openly, and listen carefully to each other's concerns. Bring freshness into your relationship while respecting each other's comfort, boundaries and consent, so that intimacy never becomes an obligation or a routine neither of you feels comfortable discussing. Both partners should feel valued, involved and satisfied.

9. Develop Healthy Conflict-Resolution Skills

Disagreements are part of marriage. What matters is how couples handle them. Address conflict with respect, honesty and a willingness to understand your spouse's perspective, instead of allowing resentment to build. Focus on resolving the issue rather than defeating your partner, and avoid insults, threats, humiliation and bringing up past mistakes.

Be willing to apologise when you are wrong and agree on practical solutions. Where a conflict remains unresolved, seek guidance from a qualified counsellor or a trusted professional. Handled constructively, disagreements can strengthen understanding, trust and intimacy.

10. Agree on Roles and Responsibilities

A harmonious marriage requires both partners to understand their roles and work together to meet the needs of their family. Discuss household duties, parenting, finances and work commitments, and share responsibilities according to each partner's strengths and circumstances, rather than relying solely on traditional or modern stereotypes. The goal is a partnership in which both husband and wife feel respected, supported and accountable.

11. Practise Intentional Parenting

Children are a gift from God, and raising them requires love, patience, guidance and consistency. Agree on your expectations about discipline, education, values and faith, and the kind of adults you hope your children will become. Present a united approach where possible, discuss differences privately and avoid undermining each other's authority in front of the children. By continuing to learn together as your children grow, you strengthen your family's legacy.

Keep Choosing Each Other

A fulfilling marriage requires more than the commitment made on the wedding day. It grows through the choices couples make every day: how they speak to each other, manage disagreements, express affection, handle money, support personal ambitions and nurture their family. Routine can gradually weaken a connection, so keep your relationship fresh with meaningful surprises, new experiences and thoughtful expressions of love.

The goal is not to make every day perfect. It is to remain intentional about growing together. Keep learning about your spouse. Keep communicating. Keep making time for one another. Above all, keep investing in your marriage so that love continues to grow through every season of life.

DIAMOND JUBILEE FUNDRAISING

Dining for a Diamond

Two evenings, one purpose. On Saturday 15 August 2026, old students and friends of Kakoma filled Royal Suites, Bugolobi, with Owek. Kiwanuka Ahmed, Katikkiro of Kooki, as Guest of Honour. A second dinner followed at Maple Leaf Hotel, Masaka, where Hajji Jamil Ssempijja was Guest of Honour. At both, guests shared memories, saw the plans for the Diamond Hall and pledged their support for the next sixty years.

EVERY PLATE, EVERY PLEDGE: BUILDING THE NEXT SIXTY YEARS

THE JOURNEY AHEAD

Kakoma Today

Campus life, students, academics, clubs and sports — the school as it stands at sixty.

The school compound at Kakoma today.

Staff at work; the students of Kakoma gathered together; the school grounds.

Sixty years on, Kakoma Secondary School stands on the land Kakoma Church of Uganda Parish gave in 1967: a government-aided, Church of Uganda school teaching both O and A Level, still known across Kooki as "the University of Kooki".

Much has changed since its first students arrived. Electricity now reaches the school, the road is easier, and its teachers are qualified. Girls have their own hostel, built by parents with support from World Vision, and science laboratories serve today's students. On sports days, the school still remembers the years when it represented Rakai at national level.

Like many rural schools, Kakoma now competes with newer schools that have more to offer, and its older buildings need renewal. That is why the Diamond Hall, the planned playground and the support of old students matter so much: they give today's students the school their parents and grandparents built for them.

KAKOMA TODAY

The Teachers Who Stayed

Mugamba Terikabi Susen with his students, the day's Biology notes on the board.

Between them, two of Kakoma's teachers have given the school more than fifty years. They have seen it change, and they remember what it took.

Mr. Sserugo Mousa

Chemistry and Physics · at Kakoma since 1995

When he arrived, Kakoma had about 240 students. There was no electricity and no stocked library, the school shared its playground with the primary school, its lorry was a Taata, and not every teacher was yet qualified. He remembers 1998 to 2001, when Kakoma excelled in sports at national level for three years, representing greater Rakai, and students came from all over Uganda. Today there is electricity, the school is easier to reach, and its teachers are qualified. "I have seen things change," he says.

Mugamba Terikabi Susen

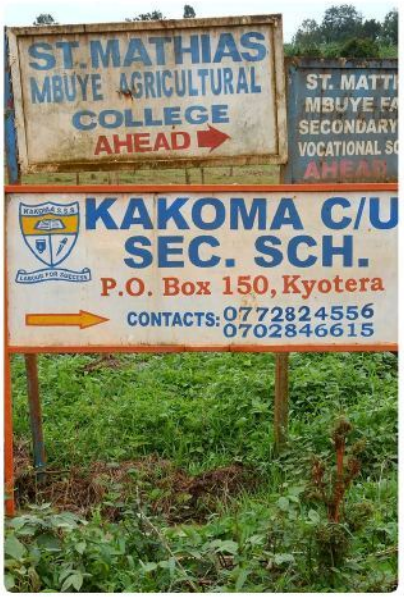

Chemistry and Biology · at Kakoma since 2005 · old student

He knows Kakoma from both sides of the desk. As a student, he walked nine kilometres to school from Gaza, with no shoes, and finished in 1996. He has now taught here for twenty years, and he agrees with the community: Kakoma is rightly called "the University of Kooki".

Building the Next 60 Years

The Diamond Jubilee Hall Project is a planned multi-purpose hall for Kakoma: a lasting gift from this generation to the next, and the focus of the Jubilee fundraising. Alongside it, land has been set aside for a new school playground, where the Jubilee celebration itself is held.
